

While her [] negotiated diplomatic challenges at the Nato meeting, the US First Lady visited a Salvation Army [] in east London. Melania Trump met children from a [] primary school, and helped [] Christmas presents. She also revealed her [] of familiarity with a [] of the British Christmas, the mince []. There's flash photography in this report by [] correspondent, Daniela Relph.

Traffic was stopped, the road [] London E5 had a VIP visitor. The Salvation Army in Clapton was [] just a few days' notice that Melania Trump was coming. The children of Baden Powell Primary School [] were only told this morning who they were about to [].

A church [] in East London is perhaps an unusual setting for a visit from an American First Lady. But this is [] territory for Melania Trump.

A Christian organisation and a global [], the Salvation Army was seen as a good fit for today's []. Melania made Christmas decorations and [] to the kids and their teachers. The [] was of Christmas in America, the journey to London and the Trump family - [] with the odd revelation.

She's never had a mince pie, an English mince pie. She's never had a mince pie? I was like, "You [] to try it, then!" Did she try one? She hasn't tried it yet but she's going to try it []. If you think about it, you're not really [] to get a chance to see her again, so you have to kind of [] remembering.

The visit of the First Lady may have been a [] unexpected for the Salvation Army, but will be a [] for their Christmas present [].

The Salvation Army has a [] of work in America, and I think Mrs Trump has seen our work there. But also the Salvation Army's [] is the UK, and she really [] to come and meet children.

The visit ended, of course, with a year five class photo - today with a [] extra guest [] in - as this American First Lady got a [] of Christmas in the UK.
