

A third person has now [redacted] positive in the UK for coronavirus. The patient did not [redacted] the virus in China, where the [redacted] majority of cases have been found, but [redacted] in Asia, before travelling to the UK, and has been taken to a [redacted] NHS treatment centre. Meanwhile, China's ambassador to the UK, Liu Xiaoming, has [redacted] the British government of over-reacting to the virus outbreak. Our correspondent Rupert Wingfield-Hayes [redacted] from Hong Kong. This is what happens when fear takes hold. [redacted] in Hong Kong today were being cleared of rice and toilet paper as rumours [redacted] of a complete shutdown of the [redacted] with mainland China. Out in Hong Kong harbour, a huge [redacted] ship, the virus possibly [redacted] on board. Several passengers have tested positive and no one is being [redacted] off. From his balcony, Hinsley Lee can look out at his home town, but can't go [redacted]

TRANSLATION: I am nervous but the only thing we can do is stay in our [redacted] and be careful. Hong Kong has now at least five [redacted] of people with the coronavirus who haven't been to mainland China and haven't had any apparent [redacted] with people from mainland China. Also, three of them [redacted] in the same place, that is this building behind me here, and that may be the first indication of what is [redacted] community transmission. That is the virus [redacted] from one person to another here in Hong Kong. [redacted] here say they are now not optimistic that the virus can be contained and that a full [redacted] may be on the way. Not so, according to the Chinese ambassador to London, who today went on the [redacted], insisting China has the situation under control. It is our [redacted] that the governments of all countries, including the UK, should understand and support Chinese [redacted]. Respect the professional advice of WHO, avoid overreaction, avoid creating [redacted]. But at the same time, from Wuhan, [redacted] the like of which we haven't seen in generations. Stadiums, gyms and conference centres all being [redacted] into fever centres, so desperate is the shortage of beds for the sick.
